OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, JULY 25, 1866.

"Who knoweth what a day may bring forth?" Surely no single month in our time has been productive of such results as I have to chronicle. My news is as sensational as the galleries at Versailles. We left Prussia and Italy opposed and in arms against Austria. The respective armies were being massed upon the frontiers, while neutral Powers were employed in attempts to lay, by diplomatic nostrums, the ghost of a war which arose grim and terrible. The public sympathy in this country sided with Austria. Prussia was too much identified with the clever and haughty Bismarck to obtain well-wishers, and Italy had apparently forfeited public confidence by an alliance with so retrograde a country as Prussia, or with a Government so despotic as that of William, King by Divine right. Not only did Austria win the opinions abroad, but within the bounds of the Federation. The chief Powers of the Bund, certainly the majority of the thirty-five States, considered her cause as their own, and determined to back up their opinion with arms. When Russia offered assistance to Austria, she, relying on the spirit of a splendid army, and the concurrence of these minor States, considered the work before her a too easy a character to require assistance and replied that she could crush both her antagonists without any foreign arms. It was generally supposed that Austria would detach Italy from Prussia by the cession of Venetia (very much the same game that Francis played with Charles V to detach him from Henry VIII, which he did), and that then the house of Habsburg might a leisure proceed to stamp upon and crush out the pride of the house of Hohenlohe. The result, however, is otherwise. I have before me a proclamation dated July 10th, signed Francis Joseph, and posted on the walls of Pesth, in which that young man tells the Hungarians that, having lost all, he is come to turn himself upon the loyal attachment of his "dear children of Hungary." Report says that some of these "dear children"—chastened, because loved, doubtless—are ready to salute the double-headed eagle, and to spill their blood for the beautiful Empress Elizabeth (whose tears move the tender-hearted race), as they were to espouse the cause of the renowned Maria Theresa. He is coming, he says, to be crowned king, and to give them as end of constitutions and liberties. This is a somewhat late move for the man who stood over those prostrate liberties in 1848 with dripping sword! If there is any truth in type, however, it is in fact, to which is attached another fact no less suggestive and interesting. Kossew, the ex-Dictator of Hungary, has issued from the Italian camp a counter-blast which is thinning the Austrian rank and file, and shedding hope into the sick hearts of his oppressed and long-suffering fellow-countrymen. All this, you say, implies terrible emergency. It does, but no greater than that which exists. The proud Habsburg is indeed humbled. Within one short week he fell back crushed and defeated before the Prussian legions, and besought the good offices of France by the cession to her of Venetia. The Prussians began by occupying Hanover and Saxony. They met and overthrew Benedek, who had concentrated the Austrian forces on the northern frontier of Bohemia with the design of subduing Silesia, and, advancing upon Berlin through that territory, seized upon Prague, and are now within a few miles of Vienna, awaiting the yes or no of Austria to the proposed discussion of peace on terms suggested by France, and acquiesced in by, I believe, both the opposing Powers. Italy was the first to break ground. Had I kept my last letter one day longer it would have contained intelligence of the defeat of the King, who nearly lost his son the Prince Amadeus in a collision with the Austrians under the Archduke Albert, just after passing the Mincio, on the anniversary of the battle of Solferino, and very nearly within the lines that confined that action which has made the 24th June, 1859, a red letter day in the French and Italian military calendar.

When the news of the battle reached England it was regarded as a prelude to further disasters. The numeric force and high discipline of the Austrian army seemed to assure greater apprehension in France than here, for the French made no secret of their disappointment—they spoke of the infernus of France, and wanted to know where the Prussian were lurking at a time of such emergency. On the question curiosity was soon set at rest, for no sooner had we come in possession of the confused reports of the battle of Custozza (as the sanguinary contest is termed), and were trying to disentangle truth from mere rumour or misrepresentation, than the telegraph flashed the news of the battle of Bohemia, where the number of dead, wounded, and prisoners amounted to 40,000 on the side of Austria. The battle was fought on the 26th of June between Marshal Benedek and the Crown Prince of Prussia, supported by Prince Frederick Charles. The Austrian line, composed of 300,000 troops, extended nine miles between Josephstadt and Niemburk. The Prussian force, of equal strength, opposed its course northwards.

Dr. Russell, the correspondent of the London Times, furnished an account that ranks with his best descriptive efforts, and should be read every line of it. From his watch-tower at Koniggratz he witnessed the awful agony of battle, until obliged to evacuate his position. "For some hours," says he, "the Austrian not only held their own, but were manifestly making progress, especially on the left, so that at 2 o'clock (the conflict commenced at 7.30 a.m.) on the left and centre there could be no hesitation in saying that the Prussians were all but beaten." While the Austrian centre was pressing upon the retreating Prussians a gap was left their line. This being detected by the Prussians no time was lost, under cover of the rain and smoke, to acquire a position in rear of the spot where the Austrian centre should have been. The fierce fire was opened on the flank of the Austrian gunners, everything was thrown into confusion, and the battle lost. Half the 40,000 sabres were well led the day might have been Austria's even then; but a leader such as headed the Light Cavalry charge at Balaklava was wanting, and nothing but a decent cover to the retreat was effected. The Austrian right is driven down in a helpless mass, toward Koniggratz, quivering and palpitating, as the shot and shell passed through it. Men were drowned in hundreds as they crowded over pontoon bridges, hasty laid, and sunk, or burst, ere the column could cross over; luggage trains, reserve ammunition, guns, prisoners, the spoils of that enormous host, fell into the hands of the victors, who remained masters of that hard-fought field, covered for nine miles with myriads of the slain.

The course of events is strikingly displayed by the tale of events forward to the Emperor by Benedek. The first: "It is this morning. The battle is commencing. Pray to God." The second: "It is noon. The battalions are wavering. Pray to God." The third: "2 in the afternoon. The Prussians are beaten. Return thanks to God." Dr. Russell reports that at a later hour the Marahal left the field, exclaiming: "All is lost but my life! I would to God I had that too!" To him had been entrusted the supreme command now devolving upon the Archduke Albrecht, who returns with the prestige of success from conflict with Italy.

It would seem that there was something more than an oversight on the part of the Austrians to account for the Prussian success. The Prussian infantry appeared to possess an arm that multiplies its power to a prodigious extent. A battalion furnished with the celebrated needle-guns was able to fire ten rounds to one of its opponents. A British correspondent of one of the London journals says that the Prince Imperial, desirous to have this weapon explained to him, the Emperor took him into the garden and commanded a sentinel to load and fire quickly as he could, and in amusement. The man obeyed, but before he could discharge his piece once, the Emperor, who had carried a needle gun from his study, loaded and fired five times. "Hem," said the Emperor, will lead against them. Their strength will scarcely be tested this session, which is nearly closed—the review will be theirs; but I question much whether they will like you to have one!" "Certainly, sire."

"Then so you shall," answered the Emperor. Rumour says that the offer of this invention was rejected by England and by France, probably by Austria too, and now the Emperor, who is possessed of it, is the sole possessor of it. From the detailed account of its mechanism, which you will see, there is nothing in the gun itself that cannot be copied. The secret lies in the charge. This is inserted in the breech, the charge, the ball, and the explosive substance being in one case. When this is placed in the breech the trigger is drawn, which, instead of discharging a hammer upon a capped nipple, sets free a piston, which drives air into the gunpowder and forcibly strikes against the rear of the bullet upon which is lodged some explosive material that immediately responds to the appeal. Now it is the nature of this explosive powder which is unknown save to the Prussian Government, and the two inventors who, if we are to trust report, enjoy all they wish at the hands of the Prussians except liberty. Every demand is granted. The day is light, the night is dark, the world is at their disposal. What they admitted, Habs' ston was intended the railing would have been used as weapons of offence, but not one was touched; there was scarce a footprint upon a flower-bed. The police, however, in obedience to orders, laid about them with vehemence, and when the great pressure of the crowd drove them into the Park Lane, they entered and held their meeting in the Park. There were 60,000 people there who, it is said, had come to Hyde Park, a meeting which reads as though he were about to put down a riot, and directs the Park to be closed at 5 o'clock, and entrance refused. LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY.
SITTINGS IN BANDO.
BEFORE THEIR HONORS SIR ALFRED STEPHEN, Chief Justice,
Mr. Justice HARGRAVE, and Mr. Justice CHENEY.
PROHIBITION.

This was an application to set aside an order of Mr. Justice Hargrave, in chambers, refusing to grant a prohibition of all further proceedings by the Klamon Bench on an alleged conviction of the applicant under the Masters and Servants Act.

Mr. William Manning, Q.C., and Mr. Stephen appeared in support of the application, and Mr. Butler in support of the conviction.

The applicant, Munson, had been hired in Sydney, to serve Robert Hindmarsh, of Wellington, one of the partners of the firm of Munson, Chapman, & Hall, for a term of six months, at the rate of £50 per annum. He left the service of Hindmarsh in two days after his arrival, having previously asked for, and been refused, permission to leave. He had, he said, been awed at and abused. He had received no pay or wages from his employer, but was to be stopped from leaving if he did not fulfil his agreement. Hindmarsh laid an information against Munson at the Klamon Police Office, for obstructing from the hired services of the former; and upon this charge Munson was arrested, tried, and sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment. The information was laid under the Masters and Servants Act on 20th Nov., No. 23, and the offence disclosed on such information was under the second section of that statute, namely, that of obstructing from the hired services of any master or master's agent, the master or master's agent.

Under the third section of the same Act, an offence was committed, inoperative only against the insolvent and his creditors, and, therefore, our insolvent Act, which is of the nature of a bankruptcy, is not applicable to him.

We then turn to a 30 of the same Act; and there it is enacted, that further execution of any judgment or process against the estate of an insolvent shall, in lodging the Insolvent Proclamation Order with the Sheriff, be stayed; and that where any property of the insolvent has not been "attached" by legal process, for satisfaction of any judgment, and has not been sold," such property shall be placed under Sequestration. In that case, the master or master's agent may be sued, and that, if it be established that the master or master's agent has been negligent in his duty, or in a peculiar species of conduct, might be liable to damages.

SAW MOTIONS.

There was an unusual number of applications for saws, etc., and the greater part of the morning was occupied by them.

SHAW V. BENNETT.

This was an application made by the defendant's attorney, Mr. Maguire, for the allowance of costs, and it was to be noted that the plaintiff had been remitted to the Court to-day, and being unable to satisfy the Bench that they have lawful means of support, were sentenced to pay £100 damages.

The debts themselves were, of course, to be paid.

For the reasons given, we think that the writs of execution in this case were properly set aside, and not unjustly with costs—however hardly that portion of the Order, all that being considered, may be held to operate. We say nothing of the costs of trial, expense and so forth, but the plaintiff might be remitted to sustain the costs of the trial, because that Order is not now before us. But, if the same be valid as a statutory remedy, they cannot be supported in part, as precedes to enforce the payment of costs merely.

The Court held that the probation must go. A majority of the Bench held that it must be imposed, and that it should be imposed before justice, under one statute or another, was done to the plaintiff.

Prohibition to go, but without costs.

ADMISION OF A BARTENDER.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL moved the admission as a barrister of Frederick Bowe, George, and John Hall, who had been called at the Bar of Liverpool of Lincoln's Inn, London, on the 20th of January, 1864; and on the 4th of August, 1864, had been admitted to the Victorian Bar, since he had practised chiefly in one of the County Courts, and the Attorney-General had received a letter from the Judge, in which he was advised that Mr. Bowe was a proper person to be admitted to the Bar of New South Wales.

Their Honors had great pleasure in ordering the admission of Mr. Bowe.

CRIMINAL CASES.

THE QUEEN V. BERTHARD.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL produced the original order from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, granting him, as the attorney of the colony, leave to appear before the Queen's Bench, to defend himself in the cause, allowing a new trial to Louis Bertrand, convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of Henry Kinder. The learned gentleman moved that this document be allowed as a record of the cause, and that the Prothonotary be directed to file it in the Court, and that the Prothonotary be directed to the Privy Council.

Their Honors made the necessary order.

THE QUEEN V. ROBERTS.

This was a special case from the Court of Quarter Sessions at Yarrawa, in which the defendant, Mr. M. J. D. Judge Pursey, as Chairman of Quarter Sessions, on the 11th of June, 1866, under the 7th and 8th George IV., a. m., for feloniously killing, maiming, and wounding his son, the plaintiff's son, was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment.

The questions raised upon this conviction were, first, whether the information was good in alleging killing, maiming, and wounding; secondly, whether under such information the plaintiff was entitled to a trial by jury; and, thirdly, whether the evidence was sufficient to support the charge of wounding. The evidence was that the prisoner was seen to fire at the man when at a distance of about twenty yards from him, and that man, who was a policeman, was immediately afterwards seen on the animal's skin.

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL, who appeared for the Crown, contended that the evidence was sufficient, and that the evidence could legally convict of either of the offences named in the indictment.

The prisoner was not represented.

Their Honors sustained the conviction.

THE QUEEN V. McFARLANE.

This was a special case from the last sitting of the Supreme Court, in its criminal jurisdiction, at Darlinghurst.

The prisoner, Paul McFarlane, had been tried and convicted of perjury before his Honor the Chief Justice.

The alleged perjury had been committed in an action for slander tried before Mr. District Judge McFarland, in the Master普通法院, for the recovery of £100 damages.

The defendant stated that he had been an arrangement between himself and Mr. Hosking, the former owner, that he should remain in the house for a week or two rent free, and then leave, and that he should be paid one-half of the rent, less £10, to be paid to the plaintiff.

The defendant agreed to be paid one-half of the rent, less £10, while he remained in the house.

John Gogery, master of the ketch Peacock, was fined 20s. with costs, for hiring as cook and seaman John Mews, who had obtained a license to ship without delivering or sending such license to the Shipping Office.

FIRE IN GEORGE-STREET.

About 3 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the shop of Mr. Skinner, draper, opposite the Telegraph Office, in George-street. The police on duty in the vicinity first discovered the flames in the front window, and in a short time succeeded in getting down the shutters, when they found the goods in the north window had ignited—the heat burst the plate-glass windows, and two or three policemen removed as much of the burning material as they could, but the fire speedily spread to the counter and shelves, and for the moment a large conflagration seemed inevitable. In about a quarter of an hour after the fire was first discovered the engine of the Insurance Brigade came up, and the firemen attached the hose to the fire-plug; the force of water was sufficient to stop the progress of the flames, which had worked their way to the rear of the shop, and in a short time the fire was subdued.

A large quantity of goods was destroyed by the combined effects of fire and water; but had the progress of the element not been checked, it is more than probable that there would have been great destruction of property. The stock and premises are, we believe, insured.

THE WHETHER.—Nothing but the weather all the week; not a drop of rain has fallen, and on one or two days the heat has been excessive for the time of year. Although the need of rain is not so much felt in the city, as in the country districts, yet it is quite necessary that we receive some rain, else we may be liable to the want of food. On Sunday, Robert Aspinwall, while on the road to Maidstone, fractured his leg, and was removed to Moulsebrook or Maidstone hospital. On Tuesday, William Fitzgerald was fearfully scalped in the leg, by the upsetting of a pot of hot water.

GROWING SEASONS.—"Gazette" notices the first of October is fixed for the Quarter Sessions at Mururundi. There are already five criminal cases for trial.

THE SPANISH.—There is every prospect of present that the farmers will have a plentiful crop; if such is the case, much misery will be spared to hundreds of persons that the two past bad seasons have all ruined. One good season will again bring joy and gladness to many hearts; for a long time past there is more misery and distress among the humble classes in Spain than any person could imagine. It is only a few to whom these fearful facts are known—the minister and medical men, whose business it is to help them, to every house. Revelations of misery and want, patiently borne, could be told by those gentlemen that would indeed show the state the country is in.

STATE OF TRADE.—Everybody is complaining there is no trade to speak of, and the quantity of money, for what with the want of expansion in the foreign market, and that last by two bad seasons, no one seems to have any money. The Bank has commenced, and he doubt money will in a few weeks again circulate, and carry us on until harvest, when better times will be looked for.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR.—On behalf of the few "Old Harrovians" in this colony I beg to call your attention to an error in the English Telegraph which appeared in your issue of Monday last, reporting that "Eton beat Harrow at the annual cricket match."

It is rumoured that the Ministry will propose an issue of Treasury notes, and additional stamp duties.

Many men who left employment to join Government parties have gone back to work.

The Lady Darling (s.), reports having passed a schism, capitated, off Point Lookout; supposed to be the triumph.
